Each cup is hand-made in London and inspired by both patinated antiques and the forms and glazing of traditional Japanese pottery. Wheel-thrown using high-iron stoneware, the cups are glazed in a soft celadon and reduction-fired, resulting in subtle variations from piece to piece.

Fine ridges are worked into the surface as the cups are formed, creating a gentle profile that allows the fingers to sit comfortably around the vessel. Designed to accompany the R.A.W. Collection Celadon Teapots, the cups share the same material and finish, forming a cohesive set.
