Each teapot is hand-made in London through our close collaboration with two specialist makers, reflecting a long history of clay and natural fibres being used in tandem. The ceramic body is wheel-thrown using high-iron stoneware, then glazed in a soft celadon and reduction-fired, resulting in subtle variations from piece to piece.

Once fired, each pot is taken to our weaver, who creates a bespoke handle tailored to its form and scale. The handles are made from round cane drawn from the inner core of the rattan palm, first softened in
